screening can save your life.

Get checked.
Learn about regular,
preventive women's health screenings.

It's a fact - screening saves lives. But life is busy and time is short. If it's been a while since you've seen an OB/GYN provider, give us a call for a regular check-up. Peace of mind is definitely worth taking the time.

Schedule an appointment with one of our providers today.

BUSINESS RESOURCES

As one of the few chambers of commerce in the Western United States that is supported 100 percent by members, the Bend Chamber receives no government funding and as such remains an unbiased advocate for the best interests of the business community. This allows the Bend Chamber to lobby hard on behalf of its members when it comes to civic matters and to take on controversial issues others cannot or do not for political and other reasons.

To learn more, contact us at BendChamber.org | (541) 382-3221

The Bend Chamber represents over 1,200 businesses with more than 23,000 employees, making it one of the largest chambers in the Pacific Northwest.

The Bend Chamber's roots run deep in Bend's history. Although business alliances existed in Bend as early as 1907, the chamber's membership began to rise in the 1920s and 1930s, as area visitors began discovering Bend's unique recreational haven. Over the years, the number of Chamber members has grown steadily with Bend residents.

Some of the chamber's earliest members include Miller Lumber Co., Bend Garage, (now Chevrolet Cadillac of Bend) and the law firm now known as Bryant, Lovlien & Jarvis. All of those businesses still are thriving in Bend today.

The Bend Chamber always has been progressive, with its first woman president, Irene Bostleman, serving in the 1960s. Irene ran Carlson Sign Co. after her husband, Ted Carlson died. Their son, Peter Carlson, is now president of Carlson Sign Co. and was the chairman of the Bend Chamber Board of Directors in 2005.

Bend Chamber of Commerce

City of Bend

(541) 388-5505 | www.bend.or.us

The City of Bend values its business community and looks to local business leaders for input on City policies that impact economic development and business growth. Their goal is to diversify the City's economic foundation through investment in infrastructure and urban form.

Economic Development for Central Oregon: EDCO

(541) 388-3236 | www.edcoinfo.com

Central Oregon business begins with EDCO. Our mission is to create a diversified local economy and a strong base of middle class jobs in Central Oregon. Whatever stage your business is in, Executive Director Roger Lee and his economic development team have the tools and information to assist you.

Small Business

Development Center: SBDC

(541) 383-7290 | www.cocc.edu/sbdc

The Central Oregon SBDC works one-on-one with entrepreneurs to start, build and expand their businesses. Experienced advisors provide knowledge, support and educational workshops. Businesses can gain access to practical resources for business planning, financing, and market research.

DON'T LOSE YOUR MARBLES

Whether you live in town or are visiting the area, Bendforbusiness.com is your gateway to explore business development in Bend. It's your source to learn about business license requirements, the next professional development event or the next informational session.

“Bendforbusiness.com provides the platform for each of the participating organizations/pillars to define their personas or business ecosystem to the outside world,” said Stephanie Shaver, the head of marketing and design for the Bend Chamber.

Are you interested in relocating your business or starting one in Bend? Do you need data to help you compare Bend to other cities in the country? Are you looking for business incentives? Or perhaps are you working on a business plan and need to know more about the employment trends in Central Oregon?

In Bend there are a multitude of ways to connect to the business community and to find information that will help you grow or relocate your company.

For example, you can visit Bendforbusiness.com. Bend For Business is a website comprised of information from the Bend Chamber of Commerce, the City of Bend, Economic Development for Central Oregon and the Small Business Development Center.

“It is designed to be a tool for local business owners as well as incoming business to get to the proper organization to help them thrive here in Bend,” Shaver explained.

In addition to the four primary organizations that make up Bendforbusiness.com, there are dozens more that support business development in Bend. Each provides a unique service.

“In working together, we can better serve our business community,” Shaver said.

WHEN it comes TO BUSINESS

*The Bend Chamber takes the lead
- yesterday, today and tomorrow.*

OUR MISSION:

The Bend Chamber is a vital strategic partner creating resources and opportunities for member success, quality of life, engagement and meaningful impact.

OUR VISION:

The vision of the Bend Chamber is to gather, equip and mobilize our business community to drive a prosperous economy and unmatched quality of life.

Be a part of the bigger picture by joining the Bend Chamber. Our strength is in our members.

When it comes to business in Bend, no organization has been looking out for the best interest of this community longer than the Bend Chamber of Commerce. Since 1926, the Bend Chamber has worked to support and put businesses in the position to thrive – individually and collectively.

From traditional Bend Chamber Ribbon Cuttings and Business After Hours events, to newer and more progressive programs such as “What’s Brewing?” and the Young Professionals Network, the Bend Chamber provides the tools and the resources Bend businesses, visitors, relocators and the community at large need to succeed.

Membership in the Bend Chamber of Commerce is much more than a plaque on the wall, the fulfillment of a sense of civic obligation or the means to generate new business. Rather, membership represents a commitment to the continued prosperity of the Bend economy. It’s a means of facilitating meaningful and impactful change, of accessing and taking advantage of valuable educational opportunities and interacting with like-minded individuals and businesses that share the same dedication to fostering a livable, sustainable and prosperous Bend.

The Bend Chamber has been here for the business community for over 85 years. Encouraging business development, support, retention and recruitment to community development, information dissemination and issues management, the Bend Chamber takes the lead - yesterday, today and tomorrow.

For businesses seeking education, outreach, advocacy, networking and more, and who want their membership dollars to work hard for them in the hands of local stewards, there is and always has been one clear leader, the Bend Chamber Commerce - credibility you can trust.

Advocating for small business is essential to maintain and enhance the life style of Bend. The Bend Chamber Board of Directors, made up of 16 representatives that meet monthly, works hard to represent its constituents, the Bend Chamber membership.

The Bend Chamber represents members on a legislative level

The 2015 Oregon Legislative Session was a highly partisan and aggressive one with over 2,500 bills introduced. This was the first year the Bend Chamber participated in regularly scheduled conference calls held directly with local delegation. Also noteworthy was the incorporation of a partnership in conjunction with the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce legislative arm and its newly effective lobbying efforts.

The Bend Chamber supported opportunities for business and economic health throughout the Central Oregon community by both an offensive and defensive agenda. Letters and actions to support and oppose bills had a variety of successes, amendments, and failures but still established relevance.

The Bend Chamber generated over 17 letters supporting, defending, or assisting members and partners. In total, 12 bills the Bend Chamber supported passed and 14 bills the Bend Chamber opposed died.

IMPORTANCE OF UNDERSTANDING THE ISSUE

President & CEO of the Bend Chamber of Commerce

As individuals, we are the judges and juries for everything we believe. We gather data, analyze and form opinions. The level of effort put into this is different from person to person, as well as the issues being considered. We can spend a great deal of time contemplating, or make a decision in the blink of an eye. However, with important issues, it is a necessary process to ensure our beliefs are well founded. Therein lies the issue: How many of us as individuals have the time and energy to be engaged?

Engagement and meaningful impact is one of three legs of stability for the Bend Chamber. We are nonpartisan, so we do not blindly support the ideals of either political party. We are entirely membership supported, meaning we receive no government funding or grants. This gives us the freedom to engage in issues from a business prospective and to be a driving force in supporting a climate that creates and supports businesses, both large and small. Businesses create jobs, which supports families, improves our quality of life and creates the community we all live in.

Advocacy is far more than making a statement. The Bend Chamber's advocacy efforts take a great deal of time, research, evaluation, discussion and require a vote of approval from the Bend Chamber Board of Directors. Every issue the Bend Chamber supports goes through this process to ensure the best interest of the members it represents and that no single person can steer the organization.

Perhaps the strongest part of advocacy is helping to provide information to you, our members. From our What's Brewing community forums and forecast breakfast series programs, to the weekly e-news and the Bend Business & Lifestyle Magazine you are reading, we are working hard to provide you with the information you need to make educated decisions on issues that impact you and your businesses.

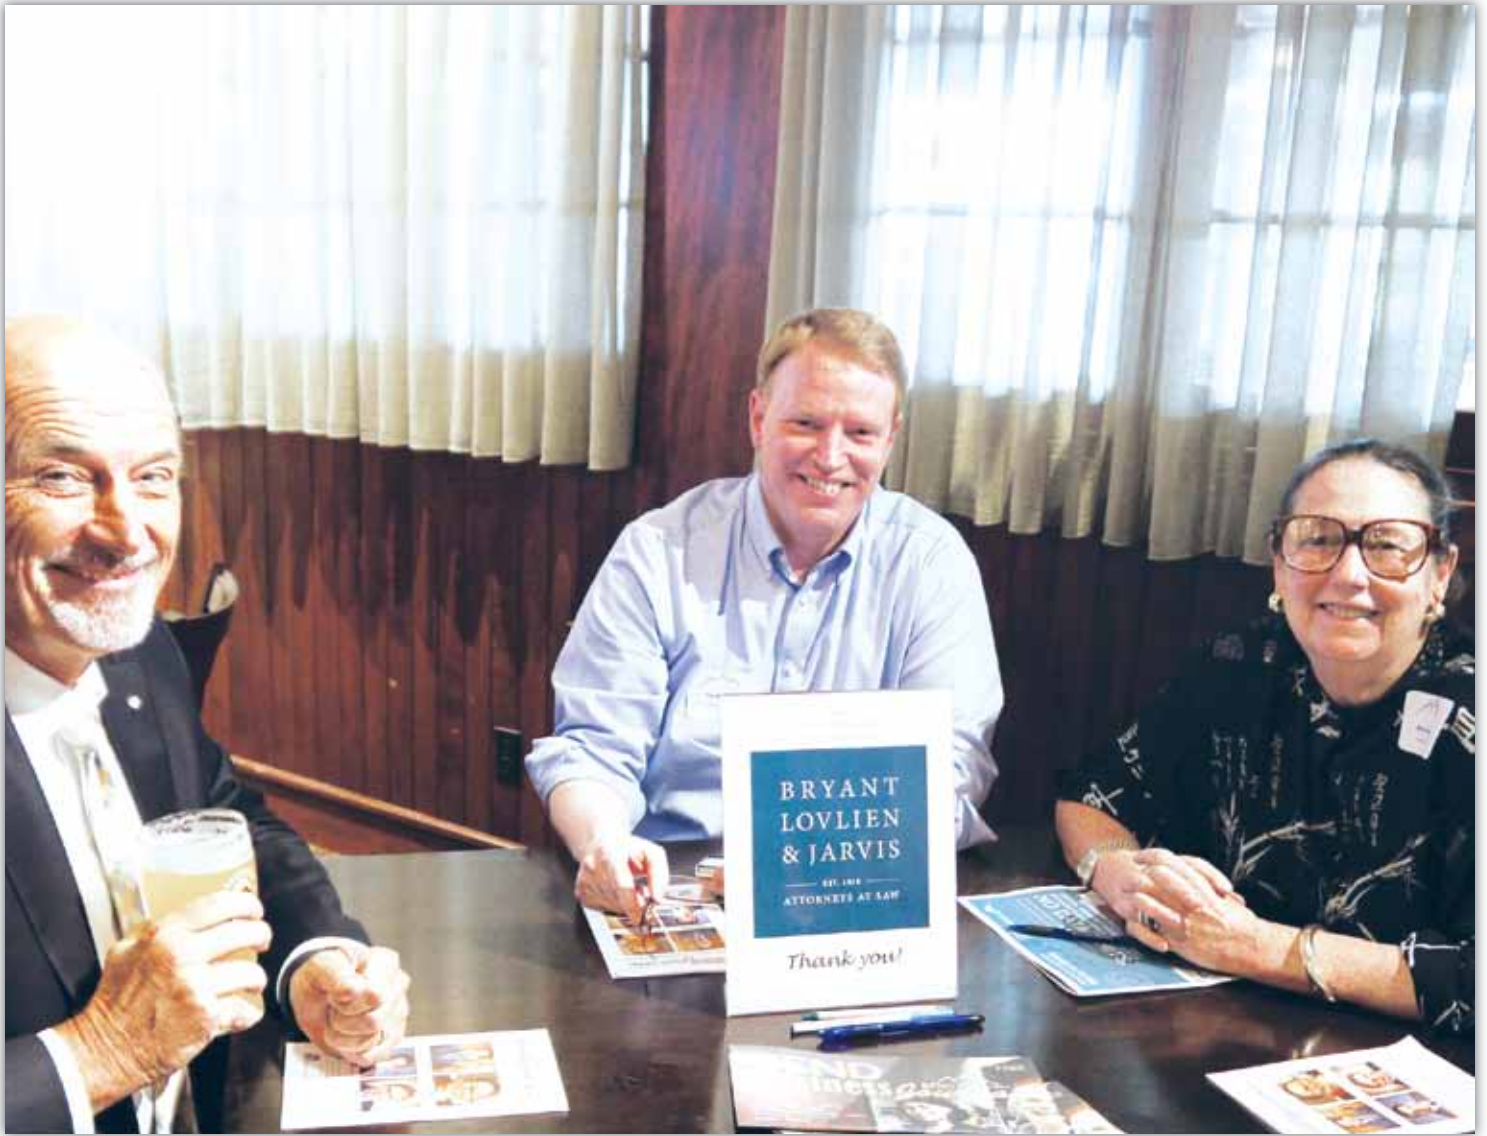

As we meet with our elected officials, state organizations and local government, it's clear that business will be the target of a number of regulations and tax hikes in 2016. From a massive increase to minimum wage, to a new effort for a 2.5 percent gross receipts tax, we will be there championing business. It's more than a goal, it is our duty and honor to serve you.

Tim Casey- Casey joined the Bend Chamber in January 2003 and took the role as president and CEO in 2008.

He currently serves on many committees and boards including the Western Association of Chamber Executives, Oregon State Chamber of Commerce, City of Bend Budget Committee and the Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy Committee.

When not wearing a button-down, Casey enjoys fly fishing along the Deschutes River and spending time with his family in the Central Oregon outdoors.

ADVOCACY EFFORTS:

WHAT'S BREWING?

2015 was a productive year in Salem for the Bend Chamber. Our efforts, through the Bend Chamber Legislative Committee, assisted numerous members in having their voices heard by our state legislators, which has allowed our membership to truly make a difference. A new Advocacy Council has been formed in 2016 to further strengthen the advocacy program.

Senator Tim Knopp and Representatives Gene Whisnant, Knute Buehler and Mike McLane said letters and testimony from the Bend Chamber and our members made a positive impact on business-related issues at the State Capitol.

What's Brewing is brought to you by the Advocacy Council of the Bend Chamber in partnership with the businesses listed above.

Small Business Development Center:

Accelerates Business Growth

By: Steve Curley, director of the Small Business Development Center at COCC

The Small Business Development Center (SBDC) at Central Oregon Community College (COCC) is one of nineteen centers throughout the state that works with local businesses ranging from early stage entrepreneurs to larger traded-sector companies.

The SBDC offers educational programs focused on all aspects of business planning that include training and one-on-one advising. The center's services are available throughout the regions of Deschutes, Crook, Jefferson and North Lake counties, aligning with the COCC college district.

In the past year, the Central Oregon center has worked with 343 clients who created or retained 60 jobs, added $2.1 million in capital investment to their businesses and in total, saw an increase in sales of just over $5 million. The increase in sales is double the prior year's number. The SBDC tracks these statistics with verification from the business owners that the SBDC had a significant role in the achievement of their success.

"Businesses come to the Small Business Development Center seeking assistance in either starting their business or taking it to the next level," says Steve Curley, director of the center at COCC. "People are really good at the technical aspects of their business, but they don't have the experience or knowledge of good business practices, and that is where we can help. We have an increasing number of tools and information to help our clients grow including: Growth Wheel for strategic analysis, BizMiner for financial analysis, IBISWorld for market research as well as experience in accessing capital and international markets."

Central Oregon continues to see growth in activity for entrepreneurship as many new businesses are being started. Many of them are in sectors identified as growth industries for Central Oregon including outdoor products, technology, biotech, unmanned aerial systems/vehicles, food products and brewing. The SBDC works closely with organizations such as Economic Development for Central Oregon and Opportunity Knocks to meet the needs of these burgeoning start-ups.

The SBDC has valuable programs that continue to be popular including a monthly Business Startup class providing general information to newbies; How to Develop a Business Plan for people who want to dig deep into the dynamics of business planning; a Business Launch class for earlier-stage businesses that have started; and Growing Your Business with QuickBooks for those businesses that need some hands-on assistance with the financial tool.

A positive impact on the growth and sustainability of the Central Oregon economy.

In addition, the center offers a Small Business Management program. This one-year program is comprised of one-on-one business advising/coaching combined with monthly workshops that helps business owners and managers take their businesses to the next levels. It's a commitment geared toward business owners who see the importance of working on the business, not just in it. The program helps business owners identify the key issues that will help move them towards achieving their vision. This program is one of the key strategic initiatives of the Central Oregon SBDC and provides significant economic impact for our clients.

Another program, Grow Oregon, is an opportunity for larger traded-sector companies to receive assistance in strategic analysis, financial review, advanced market research, search engine optimization and high-level mentoring from experienced advisors. This program is more strategic in nature, focusing on growth strategies for companies who are looking to expand.

"We want to be a resource to provide information and advising that is critical to area businesses that are expanding their opportunities for growth," Curley said. "We know that a vibrant Central Oregon economy is dependent on our small businesses as they provide jobs and income for workers throughout the region."

The goal of the SBDC is to have a positive impact on the growth and sustainability of the Central Oregon economy. For more information on available services, contact the SBDC at 541-383-7290 or go to www.cocc.edu/sbdc.

BEN HEMSON
BEND BUSINESS ADVOCATE
CITY OF BEND | 541-388-5529
BHEMSON@BENDOREGON.GOV

Landscape shot by Alan Huestis with studio404photography.com

I'm so excited to be here working for the City of Bend as your Bend business advocate.

Like many new Bend transplants, I was drawn here in part by the world-class outdoor activities and the high quality of life Central Oregon has to offer. However, it was the chance to fill a role as unique as the Bend business advocate that made this opportunity too good to turn down.

I joined the City of Bend after more than four years of advocating in the Pacific Northwest's energy sector on behalf of natural gas utilities and pipelines. While the issues I'll be engaging with here are more diverse, many of the goals are the same. No matter the industry, I know business owners seek out consistent communication, transparency and a clear path to address any issues with government. I'll be doing my best to help check all three boxes.

For those of you unfamiliar with the business advocate position, I'm here to provide a number of services:

First, it's my job keep you in the loop on what's going on in city hall. Stay tuned as I get those communications ramped up! Holders of Bend Business Licenses can expect to see consistent email updates from me beginning this month. You can also find me on Twitter (@BendBizAdvocate) and on our blog at BendforBusiness.com.

Second, are you a business owner looking for help in navigating a city issue but aren't sure where to start? I'll connect you with the right folks and assist in answering any questions you may have.

Finally, I'm here to advocate for policies and initiatives that will help Bend's business community continue to grow and thrive.

In working to fulfill all three of these roles, the more feedback and interaction I have with members of our business community, the better. So here's my pitch to all of you: Please get in touch!

As I work to get up to speed on the issues that matter to Bend's business community, I'll be reaching out to many of you as well.

I'm looking forward to meeting you,!

Ben

GENERAL AVIATION

The Bend Municipal Airport is owned and managed by the City of Bend. It has a single 5,200-foot runway with parallel full length taxiways on the east and west sides.

Located on approximately 415 acres five miles northeast of the City of Bend, the Bend Municipal Airport traces its history back to 1942.

Today, a total of 77 separate structures reside at the airport, 15 city-owned and 62 privately owned. There are currently 14 businesses located at the airport. Aircraft manufacturing, aircraft parts manufacturing, fixed wing and helicopter flight training comprise the greatest commercial activity at the airport. The airport supports roughly 275 jobs and distributes approximately $13.8 million in payroll from airport businesses.

COMMERCIAL AIRPORT

Redmond Municipal Airport (RDM; www.flyrdm.com) provides daily commercial air service to Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, and Seattle via four carriers (Alaska, American, Delta, and United). Starting in June, the airport will offer direct daily service to Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport.

Several years ago RDM completed a three-year $40 million expansion project, increasing the size of the terminal six-fold. A new $18.3 million project to update the runways to be consistent with current FAA design standards is scheduled for completion this year.

CENTRAL OREGON BREEZE

The Central Oregon Breeze currently operates buses 362 days a year, with daily service from Central Oregon to Portland Area and back. During Peak-Season there are 2 buses daily with Bus #1 leaving Bend in the morning and returning from Portland in the afternoon and Bus #2 leaving Bend in the late morning and returning from Portland in the evening.

CASACDE EAST TRANSIT

Cascade East Transit (CET) provides a fixed-route service in Bend with ten routes traveling from west to east and north to south, as well as complementary paratransit service for eligible riders (persons with disabilities and low-income seniors).

CET connects our Central Oregon communities together with buses that travel to and from La Pine, Redmond, Sisters, Prineville, Madras, Culver, Metolius and Warm Springs.

Within these communities, CET provides demand response service, also known as Dial-A-Ride, to the general public.

COMMUTE OPTIONS

Commute Options promotes choices that reduce the impacts of driving alone.

Through active transportation choice, Commute Options encourages healthy individuals, a clean environment and a strong economy. Commute Options represents transportation options in the Central Oregon community by educating citizens, businesses and government about the value of carpooling, vanpooling, walking, bicycling, teleworking and using public transportation.

Connecting the Pacific Northwest since 1873

For more than 100 years, BNSF Railway and its predecessor railroads have been connecting Oregon businesses and industry within both the region and the world. Oregon is part of the Great Northern Corridor, which spans the northern United States between the Pacific Northwest and Chicago, and reaches key points in Canada. While BNSF moves more than 330,000 carloads of freight annually in Oregon, our tracks are not limited to moving just freight. BNSF rails are used to move passengers, too, with 10 Amtrak trains operating daily on our Portland to Seattle route.

BNSF Railway has a rich history, but we're also poised for future growth. As demand increases for Oregon and U.S.-

made-and-grown products, BNSF will be there. BNSF hauls enough grain to supply over 900 million people with a year's supply of bread. We also move nearly 10 percent of every new vehicle sold in the U.S. With access to most major ports in the Pacific Northwest, BNSF moves the products we depend on every day, from iPads to mountain bikes to washing machines.

Rail transportation is the most environmentally efficient and safest way to move freight over land. In fact, an average BNSF train can carry one ton of freight, nearly 500 miles, on a single gallon of diesel fuel. That's an impressive figure, and represents a 40 percent increase in efficiency over trucking.

Moving freight by rail is also safe. The years 2012, 2013 and 2014 were the safest on record for BNSF, and 2015 was on track to exceed that record. We believe every accident is preventable and our best-in-class safety program aims to ensure that every employee comes home in the same condition he or she came to work in.

Since 2000, BNSF has invested nearly $50 billion in our infrastructure, signals, crossings, bridges, maintenance and safety technology. We've invested billions in the newest, most environmentally-friendly and fuel-efficient locomotives available. BNSF is also consistently named a top military-friendly employer in the U.S.

At BNSF, we're committed to providing unrivaled service to our customers, while serving the needs of the thousands of communities we both operate and live in. We do this while upholding our commitment to protecting the environment and being invested community partners. We look forward to growing with you in Bend.

THE CHAMBER

ORIGIN OF THE CONCEPT

<http://www.chamberme.com/history.html>

The concept of various businesses joining together in a mutual effort to increase commerce had its beginnings in Europe hundreds of years ago. Primarily as a defensive tactic, traders banded together for protection against common enemies and to establish policies to govern trade. This was eventually extended as a means of exerting influence on governments and legislation.

The first organization of businesses was evidently in Marseilles, France, where the use of the term “chamber of commerce” was first documented. This fledgling group was established by the city council in 1599--over four centuries ago. The idea caught on and spread to Germany and eventually throughout Europe.

the things presented on this website. The primary function of protecting commerce remains the same, but it is interesting to follow the changes and adaptations of chamber functions through the years as chambers have adjusted to the changing needs of society. Today the role of a chamber of commerce has expanded to address socioeconomic concerns and social needs, going far beyond its original intent several centuries ago.

and state issues. The U.S. Chamber is concerned with national issues and dealings with the federal government.

COMES TO AMERICA

The modern chamber of commerce is more of an American development. The New York State Chamber is the oldest chamber of commerce in America, formed in 1768 and chartered by King George III in 1770. That makes it older than the Declaration of Independence; chambers of commerce are not a new development.

INTERNATIONAL CHAMBER

The chamber concept functions on a global scale as well. The International Chamber of Commerce (ICC) is the largest business organization in the world. Founded in 1919, it now has hundreds of thousands of companies under its umbrella in over 130 countries. With headquarters in Paris, it keeps organizations like the United Nations and the World Trade Organization in touch with international business issues.

LOCAL CHAMBERS

The first local chamber was founded in Charleston, South Carolina in 1773. This was followed by one in New Haven, Connecticut and then another in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania in 1800. The trend rapidly spread across the country. By 1870, there were forty local chambers of commerce in the United States. Today there are over 5,000 chambers of commerce.

The purpose of the chamber of commerce has evolved from simply the protection and promotion of commerce to many of

NATIONAL CHAMBER

President William Howard Taft sent a letter to Congress in 1911 addressing the need for a “central organization” in order to “keep purely American interests in a closer touch with different phases of commercial affairs.” A few months later, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce was born.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce began in 1912 and today claims a direct membership of 300,000 businesses and 3 million entities in state and local chambers. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is not the same as local and state chambers, which focus on local

The primary purpose of the ICC is to promote trade and investment, an open market for goods and services, and to encourage the free flow of capital.

“I am very impressed that the chamber provides such personal service for its members and also that there are so many opportunities to market and network our organization.”

TAYLORNW

ONCE UPON A TIME #inBend

By: Rachael Rees van den Berg, Bend Chamber Communications Coordinator

When settlers first gathered at “Farewell Bend” looking to cross the Deschutes, the area was mostly open forest of Ponderosa pine that melded into the high desert ecosystem replete with sage brush, bitter brush and junipers.

The first commercial sawmill was opened by the Pilot Butte Development Company in May 1901. Bend was incorporated in 1905 and grew to 536 people in 1910. In 1908, the Deschutes Railroad wars began, and with the hammering of the golden spike in 1911, the area was opened up by the railroads to more intensive timber harvesting.

By the early 1920’s the population in Bend had exploded to 5,400. Bend was, and remained a mill town, with the industry driving Bend’s economy well through the first half of the 1900s.

In 1918, the state of Oregon allowed the cities in Oregon to plan their own expansion. And Bend was doing just that, modifying to suit its bustling timber industry. The first car drove up the road at Pilot Butte on July 1922. The Pine Tavern opened its doors in 1936, the Tower Theater opened in March 1940 and Mt. Bachelor Ski Area was founded by Bill Healy in December 1958.

But by 1969, things started to change. The Oregon legislature adopted Senate Bill 10, which required every city and county in the state to have a comprehensive land use plan that met state standards. Although the law was weak, with most cities and counties refusing to develop plans due to no effective enforcement mechanism or a program of technical assistance from the state, it was the start of the transformation of land use policy in Oregon.

Tom McCall, the 30th governor of Oregon who was in office from 1967 to 1975, wanted to protect development land. There were two main industries: wood products companies and agriculture and McCall wanted to put a process in place to manage land development. In 1973, he requested legislation establishing a statewide program for land use planning, and by May of that year, SB 100, which created the Land Conservation and Development Commission (LCDC) and the Department of Land Conservation and Development (DLCD). These changes encouraged higher density urban areas and careful considered growth of urban growth boundaries in an effort to prevent urban sprawl.

So what does this mean for Bend and Oregon? This means our state is different than many others. It means urban development is not allowed beyond the UGB - the invisible line in the dirt that separates the city from the country land - unless a city can prove it needs the boundary expanded.

“Bend will grow. Bend will change. Be involved.”

- Charley Miller

“I don’t know if there’s any magic formula for getting people engaged, other than I think once people have been in Bend for a couple years... they realize this is a really active community.”

- Dino Vendetti

Opponents of the UGB claim is too timely and outdated, resulting in an improper balance of supply and demand in terms of land, which drives up cost and prevents redevelopment.

But proponents of the UGB claim the process ensures smart growth and protects our forest and farmlands. They believe growth should be kept within the existing cities.

Between the 1950s and 1960s, the population in Bend only increased by 500. But by the 1980s, Bend was a tourist hot spot with a population of nearly 18,000. Today, we have a population of 81,236, according to the United States Census Bureau, with a diverse economy that includes multiple different business sectors.

The last time the city of Bend expanded its UGB was in 1981. The current UGB expansion began in 2004 with a residential Land Study. But 11 years later there has been no expansion.

Lease rates for industrial, office and retail space have soared. For example, in April 2012 lease rates for industrial land were $0.35 per square foot per month triple net. In April of this year, they were $0.65 per square foot per month triple net. Since leases are typically three to five years, many tenants in Bend are currently paying recession rents. But as these leases expire, rents are going up 50-100 percent due to the new demand. The result is many small businesses are being forced to close and people are being priced out of the community.

If the UGB remand is submitted in 2016, LUBA has until 2018 to approve the remand. Then the land must be annexed into the City of Bend UGB and infrastructure must be put in place. It is estimated that no new entitled land will be available for development until 2022.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the Bend metropolitan area was among the nation’s fastest-growing metros from 2013 to 2014. In 2014, Bend added 2,812 residents, making it the fourth fastest growing city in the state Bend is an entrepreneurial hot bed with a well-developed entrepreneurial ecosystem to help you start and grow your business.

Business support organizations, including the Bend Chamber of Commerce, the Small Business Development Center at Central Oregon Community College and Economic Development of Central Oregon, are here to get you connected with the local business community.

Events like Ignite Bend, the Bend UnConference and StartUp Weekend – where budding entrepreneurs can pitch an idea, form a team and launch a startup company in 54 hours – foster innovative thinking encourage entrepreneurship.

In fact, Bend received national recognition when Entrepreneur Magazine named Bend the next big city for entrepreneurship in 2012. The Kauffman Foundation also issued a report that placed Bend on a list of the top-25 metropolitan areas, in terms of per-capita density of high-tech startups, in the country.

Once you have decided to start a business, Bend has the resources to help you scale your company.

Industry clusters – groups of business that are located in an area and are part of a similar industry – are forming in the region. Bend currently has a tech, bioscience, craft beer, outdoor industry and unmanned aerial vehicle cluster. There are also several emerging clusters including food processing and energy. These clusters provide training and education opportunities; create platforms for networking, mentorship and support; and help draw investment capital to the region.

Business accelerators and incubators such as FoundersPad and Bend Outdoor Worx and E: Space Labs help cultivate local talent. They offer mentor-led programs to help entrepreneurs understand and engage with their customers, learn how to develop a scalable business model and accelerate growth in the marketplace. And collaborative work spaces are developing to give entrepreneurs the opportunity to work in environments with other like-minded professionals.

There are a number of different avenues to capital. Central-Oregon based Cascade Angels Fund, a nascent year-round angel fund, typically invests between $50,000 and $200,000 in launch-stage companies throughout Oregon to drive economic growth and fuel prosperity. Seven Peaks Ventures, an early-stage venture capital fund located in Bend, is helping companies bridge the gap between Silicon Valley and Oregon by providing capital and plugging entrepreneurs into an extended network of investment and venture partners. And short-term debt financing can be obtained through Craft3.

Bend is also the host of the Bend Venture Conference.

“With roughly $2 million invested in the competing companies over the last two years, the Bend Venture Conference has moved into a new league and it’s showing in the quality of the applicants,” said Jason Moyer, fund manager for the 2015 BVC LLC

Total awards in the 2015 Bend Venture Conference companies hit $947,500.

And programs at Central Oregon Community College and the new Oregon State University-Cascades Campus, which launched its freshman and sophomore level classes in fall 2015, will provide your company with a pool of skilled workers.

So what are you waiting for? Bend is ready for you and your business.

BEND Clusters

"It sounds in some ways that it would be negative to compete with all of these other businesses in town, but it actually works as a positive."

According to cluster leaders, economic development in Bend could be spurred by supporting clusters of innovation in specific industries that already have traction in Central Oregon.

Clusters are created when entrepreneurs with a specific market focus collaborate in one geographic area, forming relationships that benefit all members of the cluster.

"In Looking Forward, we were talking about how these other towns have really developed strong business communities," said Linda English, founding member of Looking Forward – a non-profit dedicated to making Central Oregon a better place to live, work and play.

"We studied a couple different communities like Boulder, Colorado and Austin, Texas – communities that we think Bend could learn a lot from," she said. "And one of the distinctive qualities they shared was the formation of clusters."

The formation of clusters helps support the recruitment of new businesses and talent to the area, provides training and education opportunities and creates a platform for networking, mentorship and support. It also helps draw investment capital to the region.

Bend currently has a tech, bioscience, craft beer, outdoor industry and unmanned aerial vehicle cluster. There are also several emerging clusters including food processing and energy.

"There's a huge benefit for all of them to get together," English said, referring to business leaders in specific industries. “For example, you take all of those bioscience guys and you throw them a room, they can not only swap ideas on how they can run a business, but they can swap connections left and right.”

Beyond benefitting companies within Central Oregon, English said clusters help attract new companies.

“If a business is thinking about moving here, the first question owners are going to have is, ‘Are there other similar businesses?’” English said.

Having industry clusters proves to potential new companies that infrastructure issues have been solved and there are skilled employees in that industry. It also helps companies attract employees by giving them additional job security. If an employee moves to Bend to work at a company and it doesn’t work, having a cluster ensures there are other companies in that industry the employee could work for, English said.

“It sounds in some ways that it would be negative to compete with all of these other businesses in town, but it actually works as a positive,” English said.

Clusters aid in attracting highly-skilled service providers that specialize in a specific area. In the outdoor industry, she said, there’s a need for high-end seamstresses to make products. While one company might not be able to provide enough work for a seamstress, work from several companies could guarantee it would be worth it for a high-end seamstress to relocate to the region.

Clusters can also help companies connect with specialized investors. When an investor comes to town, he or she can meet with and evaluate multiple companies. And as companies within the clusters become successful, they will re-invest money back into local businesses in their industries, which ultimately help strengthen and grow the cluster.

“If you look at Silicon Valley, where does a lot of the money from investors come from? It comes from guys that are already successful,” she said.

English decided to get together representatives of the different clusters to form the Cluster Working Group.

Today, the Cluster Working Group has representatives from three different groups: Tech Alliance of Central Oregon, Oregon Outdoor Alliance and Bend Bioscience Consortium.

Once a month, she said, leaders from each of those groups gather together to learn how to run a membership organization.

“In order for a cluster to form they need to have a clear leader; someone who is really passionate about forming an umbrella organization,” she said.

A successful cluster will have a membership list, regular networking meetings, training and education programs and investors, English said.

BIOSCIENCE

By: Rachael Rees van den Berg, Bend Chamber Communications

With a booming bioscience industry, Bend is positioned for true innovation.

The industry, which consists of about 25 companies in Central Oregon, generates more than 750 jobs for the region.

In June of 2014, Les Mace and Kate Ryan founded the Bend Bioscience Consortium (Bend Bio) as a way to connect and cultivate the bioscience sector throughout the region.

“If you have a local consortium of people who have knowledge in specific markets and broad disciplines of science and engineering, it only serves to expand and promote knowledge in that area,” said Mace, senior advisor with Focus Investment Banking and the co-chair of Bend Bio. “By coming together to network and share common challenges, from manufacturing to regulatory issues, it essentially forms a local trade association for the biosciences.”

Mace said Bend Bio helps entrepreneurs who can be overwhelmed with the high barriers of entry including constructing, financing and running a start-up bioscience business. Local experienced mentors can assist in creating long-term success and growth of entrepreneurs’ businesses.

The initiative to grow a bioscience industry is a statewide effort. Mace said Bend Bio works very closely with the Oregon Bioscience Association, which does a great job of industry advocacy with the state legislature and showing the industry’s economic impact on the state. There are over 400 traded sector companies generating over $4.1 billion in sales, employing over 17,000 employees with an average annual wage of over $57,000, according to the Oregon Business Plan.

“Oregon’s bioscience industry is ready to help power the state’s economic future through world-class research and development; medical devices; medical diagnostics; human and animal therapeutics; pharmaceuticals; reagents; research services; bio-agriculture and bio-fuels, as well as digital health and medical software,” Oregon Business Plan’s website states.

People working in bioscience encompass a broad range of disciplines.

“The bioscience industry provides high paying, clean-tech jobs,” Mace said. “I think it attracts to the area a lot of technology-related people in both the physical and life sciences, in fields ranging from engineering to molecular biology.”

In addition to Bend Bio, Mace said there is a proposed bioscience incubator to be built within OSU-Cascades. The Bend Science Station, a learning laboratory providing science education (K-12) for Central Oregon, may also co-locate with OSU-Cascades new campus.

In addition, E::SPACE Labs, a membership-based technology incubator dedicated to advancing the high tech electronic hardware device industry in Central Oregon, could be a valuable resource for emerging bioscience companies that need assistance with medical device hardware development and testing.

“The bioscience industry has long been shown to be a very desirable and rewarding career,” Mace said. “People working in this field are doing something every day that they know has a long-term positive impact by applying new physical and life science technologies to the health and wellness of our society.”

Bend Chamber member Bend Research Inc, a division of Capsugel, Dosage Form Solutions, is the parent of Bend’s bioscience industry. Started in 1975, Bend Research has spawned a half-dozen companies in the last 12-15 years, several of which have been bought by larger international companies. The company, which is a leader in drug delivery technologies and formulation development, recently completed a $20 million expansion to enhance commercial manufacturing capabilities. “Had it not been for Bend Research, we wouldn’t be as far ahead today,” Mace said. “Bend Research has played a huge role in the bioscience ecosystem of Central Oregon.”

TECH

By: Rachael Rees van den Berg, Bend Chamber Communications Coordinator

Bend is home to a growing tech cluster. With more than 50 technology companies, ranging from robotics, to software, to hardware, there's a strong network of entrepreneurs, mentors and technology professionals in this mountain town.

Take a drive to 1001 Emkay Drive and visit BendTech, the physical hub of tech in Bend. This collaborative workspace, which totals 7,000 square feet, includes 19 glass-front offices, 28 standing desks with four conference rooms a café, bar, patio and even bike racks and showers.

Are you looking for employees for your tech company? The newly constructed 34,000-square-foot Redmond Technology Education Center, located across from the Redmond Airport, houses technology-centered programs that will allow residents to train for present and future family-wage jobs.

Bend has received national attention for its supportive tech ecosystem. These resources include a tech startup accelerator called FoundersPad, as well as demo days and EDCO PubTalks that foster the entrepreneurial spirit of our community, allowing companies to show off their products and receive feedback.

Need capital? Check out Seven Peaks Ventures. Seven Peak Ventures is passionate about using technology and innovation to create businesses that have the power to impact lives around the world. The company invests in teams building market dominating businesses tackling big problems. Seven Peaks Ventures partners with passionate entrepreneurs who want to make an impact on the world by disrupting large markets with innovative solutions in the data driven enterprise, digital health technologies, consumer software and cloud-based solutions.

From fresh tech startups, to established companies, Bend has it all. This is a community that promotes and supports high-tech companies and business professionals.

"What we have is visible momentum," said James Gentes, former president of the Tech Alliance of Central Oregon. "It's still starting and it's growing quickly. Within two years, the tech cluster is going to be two or three times the size it is now."

Bend Chamber member G5 is just one of the many tech companies that calls Bend home. This Bend-based business, which employees 175 people, is the leading provider of digital marketing effectiveness in the property management sector. Founded in 2005, it was recently named one of the fastest growing private U.S. companies and one of North America's fastest growing technology companies. G5 simplifies the complexity of digital marketing with an innovative cloud-based platform that creates, measures and optimizes the entire customer experience – from awareness to advocacy – for a fraction of the cost of traditional marketing approaches.

More than a dozen Unmanned Aerial Systems companies, including manufacturers of UAV airframes and accessories and software companies, reside in Bend. Many of these companies have set up shop in Central Oregon because of the Federal Aviation Administration-selected Pan-Pacific UAS Test Range Complex that contains a test site in Warm Springs Indian Reservation.

Economic Development for Central Oregon spearheaded an effort to create a local hub of unmanned aviation technology in Central Oregon to reignite the one-time bustling aviation industry. The designation of the test site, offers value to people looking to do research and development.

“We’re trying to create a hotbed of activity for UAVs and all the things that go along with it,” said Roger Lee, executive director of Economic Development for Central Oregon.

SOAR Oregon, a statewide, not for profit Economic Development organization focused on the development of the UAS industry in Oregon, is actually headquartered in Bend.

According to SOAR, Bend is evolving as a center of UAS development activity – including platform, sensor, software and applications research. Companies are working to develop uses for UAS in agriculture, forestry, wildlife conservation, public services, and many other fields. UAS can enhance safety and generate actionable information to help people and businesses save time and money.

Bend Chamber member Lancair International Inc. manufactures advanced composite structures at its Redmond, Oregon facility, and has established proprietary relationships with hand-selected vendors in the USA, Europe, Australia and the Philippines. Worldwide, Lancairs are owned and operated in 34 countries on five continents. There have been more than 2,100 Lancair kits sold in more than 34 countries, on five continents. Hundreds are flying with tens of thousand of flight hours logged. Lancair also promotes highest standards of safety in the industry.

After the trade show, they realized the recruitment model wasn't the direction to pursue.

Oregon Outdoor Alliance

What began as an effort to support the Bend Economic Development Advisory Board and Economic Development for Central Oregon at an outdoor trade show, has grown into a new support group for the outdoor industry in Central Oregon called the Oregon Outdoor Alliance.

The initial goal was to help recruit companies in the outdoor industry and encourage them to relocate to Central Oregon, said Van Schoessler, a member of the Oregon Outdoor Alliance Steering Committee. But after the trade show, Schoessler said the organization, previously called the Outdoor Round Table, realized the recruitment model wasn't the direction it wanted to pursue.

"Rather than trying to recruit and draw businesses in, we decided to take care of our own," said Schoessler, who's also the sales manager for Seattle-based Stanley and Pacific Market International. "We realized once we establish a robust industry in Bend, companies are going to want to come here without us asking."

The Oregon Outdoor Alliance decided to cultivate the outdoor community that currently exists in the region through education and networking.

"As the economy went into the tank in 2008, the whole community was hit big time," he said. "What Bend doesn't have is enough diversity. We're trying to diversify the economy so Bend has more balance ... The outdoor industry is very solid and doesn't experience a lot of fluctuation so it can be a stabilizer to the economy."

In May of 2014, the alliance hosted its first meeting, which Schoessler said confirmed the need for the organization.

"We thought 10 to 12 people would show up and there was about 60," Schoessler said. "There were people who had started companies in their garages and office buildings."

Today, the Oregon Outdoor Alliance is aiming to be the umbrella organization that pulls together and helps strengthen the outdoor industry in Central Oregon. It has more than 170 members and a new board of directors. Bimonthly meetings, called Beer:Thrity, are hosted at different outdoor manufactures in Bend. Meetings attract a range of stakeholders in the outdoor sector from wholesalers and retailers to marketing, PR and financial service professionals, he said. Each meeting starts and ends with networking and includes an educational presentation from a keynote speaker.

Another resources for companies in the outdoor industry is an incubator called Bend Outdoor Worx.

Bend Outdoor Worx launched in April 2014 and has had three graduating classes since its inception with more on the way.

While the Oregon Outdoor Alliance is a wider-reaching, all-encompassing organization, Gary Bracelin, founder of Bend Outdoor Worx, said the incubator focuses on helping a few companies at a time through a four-month program that dives into their branding, budgets and business models.

“Both organizations want to see the outdoor industry get stronger in Bend because it makes so much sense,” Bracelin said. “It seems like a natural fit for Bend.”

Bend Chamber member Cairn, a monthly subscription box service where outdoor enthusiasts discover new products and ideas, closed $1.7 million in funding this year to expand its offerings, team and community. With this new capital, Cairn will focus on continuing to grow its team and expanding its offerings to the outdoor community and industry brands.

BREWING & DISTILLING

BEER FACT #1:

The Ancient Egyptians built the pyramids under the influence. According to Patrick McGovern, an archaeologist from the University of Pennsylvania, workers at Giza received about four liters of beer a day.

It's no secret that the craft brewery count in Central Oregon keeps rising, with breweries making everything from ales in the competitive IPA category, all the way to highly-limited specialty brews. This trend is following the nation, which is now home to more than 4,000 craft breweries, according to a recent report from the Brewers Association.

One could say our craft brewing culture was founded by "grand-daddy" Deschutes Brewery in 1988, a time when craft beer hadn't quite caught on yet, but it certainly didn't stop there. The brewery count now tops 30. For a region with only about 200,000 people, that's a lot of beer!

Yep, here in Central Oregon, we like to drink – but not just craft, locally-brewed beer. Small batch distilleries, cideries and wineries are also calling our region home. Add handcrafted bourbon, vodka, gin and specialty spirits, ciders for every season and even a handful of wineries doing some interesting work here in the high desert, and you have an imbiber's dream town.

Jason Randles, digital marketing manager for Deschutes Brewery, has worked in the industry for more than 15 years and sees many benefits with all this growth.

"Not only is there a strong camaraderie among brewers in Bend, but partnerships with other beverage companies create endless opportunities for creativity,” Randles said. “We’ve been aging a Black Butte Porter whiskey with Bendistillery for about three years now, and plan to release it to the public next fall. From our preliminary taste tests, it will definitely be worth the wait.”

It doesn’t look like the growth curve shows any sign of slowing. Just a few examples include Deschutes Brewery’s current expansion of its Bend warehouse with a new more than 57,000-square-foot facility and Atlas Cider’s new tasting room above the Old Mill District.

An offshoot of the booming beverage industry – besides happy people – is what we like to call the “beverage auxiliary” industry. There are also Bend innovators like Hydro Flask, which makes vacuum-insulated growlers, capitalizing on the consumer demand for all things drink. So we lift a glass to you! Whether you’re sipping a porter or a dry martini, a fresh apple hard cider or a glass of pinot grigio, we’ll toast you right here in Central Oregon. Cheers!

TOM BEDELL SPEAKS OUT ABOUT CONSERVATION AND FORESTRY ISSUES

READ MORE AT: HTTP://BEDELLGUITARS.COM/BLOG/TOM-BEDELL-SPEAKS-OUT-ABOUT-CONSERVATION-AND-FORESTRY-ISSUES

In September, Tom Bedell participated in the World Forestry Congress in Durban, South Africa. As the only attending guitar company, of which all have fallen reliant on the world's challenged forests, his message hit a strong chord with many of the 3,200 attendees. "Clearly sovereign governments and consumer products companies relying on our forests must take the responsibility to STOP deforestation," announced Bedell, founder of Bedell Guitars. "In the end, the survival of our hardwood and rainforests is far more essential than consuming them in our products. Besides, we can craft incredible musical instruments while honoring our forests and the people, cultures and economies that have lived among them for centuries."

The pathway is becoming easier and far more reliable. New developing technologies facilitate monitoring the harvest of challenged species and their chain of custody. This is not governmental overreach. Instead, it is a moral and ethical obligation to invest in partnering with the organizations that are pioneering DNA verification, satellite monitoring, and economic and cultural alternatives. This will enable plans and conservation cooperatives to commit to reforestation!

One of the strong messages Tom Bedell left the World Forestry Congress feeling is that focus needs to be on the future and giving HOPE in the framework of solutions. Solutions that require musical instrument companies to REFUSE to use illegally harvested trees; to REFUSE to use woods that threaten the sustainability not only of endangered species but eco-systems. The musical instrument business can make a substantial impact. Music has a broad reach. Unity with suppliers, craftsmen, and musicians to commit to reforestation alongside efforts to slow deforestation is key. It can be done!

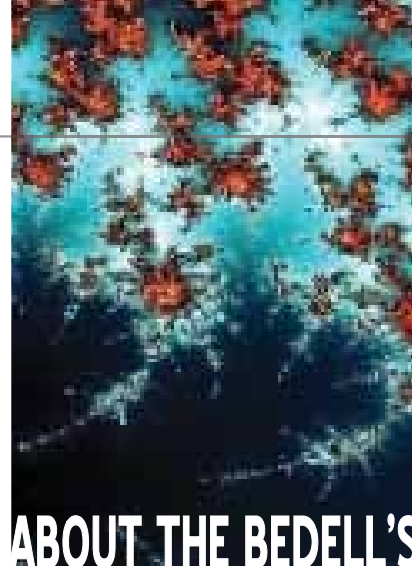

HISTORY

In the late '80s, Breedlove Guitars was just the glimmer of an idea. Larry Breedlove and Steve Henderson had a dream: to build instruments unlike any others.

They set out to craft lightweight, responsive, and impeccably crafted guitars featuring innovative designs, unique materials, and distinctive aesthetics.

In early prototyping they created the Breedlove sound that still serves as our benchmark today. How? With two key structural components which produce the distinctively crafted Breedlove sound: a graduated top (thinner on the bass side and thicker on the treble side), and an innovative bridge truss system designed to enhance bass and mid-range response by transferring the natural string-pull energy from the bridge to the tailblock and sides, thereby relaxing the top. The graduated top and the bridge truss create a unique musical and balanced voice that achieves remarkable sustain and harmonic complexity.

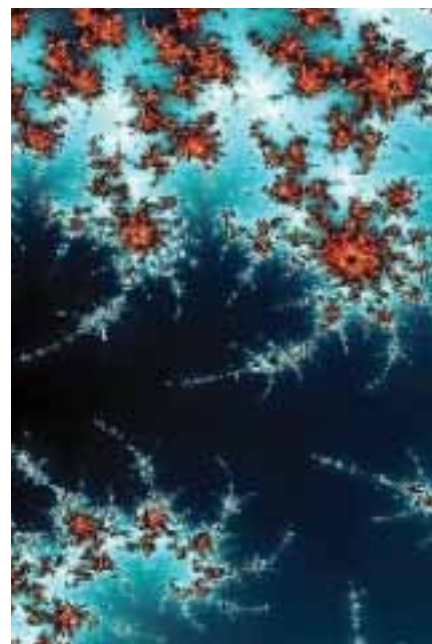

ABOUT THE BEDELL'S

Our love of music is expressed through our own collections of premium acoustic instruments, Bedell, Breedlove and Weber Mandolins.

Our boutique shop is widely known for its eclectic mix of hip apparel for men and women, unique jewelry, accessories and Molly's penchant for "being comfortable." Rock n' roll memorabilia adorns our walls and brings us right back to 'the day'. Discoveries from our travels, including fine textiles, artwork and crafts from indigenous cultures, speaks to our one-world way of life.

But, beyond material things, Two Old Hippies is an outlet for the values and beliefs that two "born" hippies acquired long ago. Seek peace and harmony for all living things. Inspire community. "Be true" to ourselves. And share in the spirit of peace, love and rock n' roll.

With a drink in hand, Tom Bedell, owner of Bend-based Two Old Hippies, shared his secrets of success in the Deschutes Brewery Tap Room.

“Life is all about passion. You have to do what you love ... If you don’t feel it in your heart. If you’re not willing to, this is too dramatic, but, die for it, you’re not going to succeed at it,” Bedell told the crowd at the Bend Chamber’s Pints with our Pillars.

Bedell’s passion for both music and guitars was ignited when he received a 1962 blonde Fender Stratocaster guitar for his twelfth Christmas.

“This was like the gift of a lifetime,” he said. “So I married this guitar; played it non-stop.”

The following year, he started teaching guitar lessons at a local music store in Spirit Lake, Iowa. The music store had very few students when Bedell started, but soon every 30-minute slot filled up.

“I taught people how to play rock and roll and so the kids would go home and they’d love it and they’d practice,” he said, “They were learning music, the music they wanted to play.”

But when the owner refused to pay him a sales commission on the guitars he was selling and a portion of the lesson income, he ventured out on his own.

“I said I want a 10 percent commission on guitars and I want half the money for lessons,” Bedell said. “She said no, and I said OK, I quit.”

At the age of 14, he set up a guitar studio in his parent’s house, began importing guitars from Japan and started his first company, Bedell Guitars.

By the time Bedell reached 16, he owned his own retail store and owned about a $500,000 revenue business.

Fast forward four decades later to November 2010, Bedell took his passion a step further, purchasing Breedlove Guitars, a Bend company on the brink of bankruptcy. Today, Two Old Hippies Stringed Instruments employs about 80 people and leases about 50,000 square feet on the east side of Bend.

When moderator Troy Reinhart asked Bedell to describe himself and what he’s done in life, Bedell didn’t go down the list of his accomplishments or how he’s grown the two businesses he’s acquired. He gave a simple response: Live life to the fullest.

“I believe in my heart, if life is not about me, but it’s about everybody else, that I’ll be a much happier person,” Bedell said. “And I have those values in my company. The purpose of my company is to better the lives of the people that are part of my company ... If my whole purpose for being is to better their lives, I’ll be successful.”

Bedell said he’s always been an entrepreneur.

“You’re either an entrepreneur or you’re not, Bedell said. “I sold scrap paper from my dad’s office when I was 4 years old to get candy money.”

The definition of an entrepreneur is the refusal to fail, he said.

“There are reasons every day to give up, (but) an entrepreneur says, ‘I am going to be successful. I will find a way. Failure is not an option,’” he said.

By the time Bedell reached 16, he owned his own retail store as well as a $500,000 revenue business.

Life is not about great ideas, he said. It’s all about passion, commitment, determination and unwillingness to fail.

What is Copyright & Intellectual Property?

BY: ALAN HUESTIS-STUDIO 404

In the world of an artist, the words “intellectual property” and “copyright” are very important ones.

If you hire an artist to shoot a project, produce an SEO video or a have a writer create a story for a publication, this is called “work for hire.” Meaning, you own the rights to the images to use as you wish and no future compensation is required for use of said images, the written story or the logo that the artist created for your company.

Studio 404 adheres to the policy when in a “work for hire” agreement, that its clients own the images to use forever and does not ask for additional compensation. But, not all artists do. Some product photographers charge their shooting day rate, or project price, and they then lease the creative creations back to the same company for use in a marketing campaign or a promotional project. Make sure you understand what the artist you have hired has as policy in a work for hire contractual agreement.

As soon as the photographer out shooting a scenic landscape clicks the shutter on his or her camera, a writer puts pen to paper while creating a poem or a short story, or a videographer creates video b-roll of events or activities ... these artists own the copyright to these creations. You may not simply use these creations, images or footage without compensation to the artist. But, you can lease the work for a fee that is mutually agreed upon by both parties.

Since I started Studio 404, I realized the value of maintaining a large library of the footage I shot, as well as all the images I created. This library has provided a constant stream of revenue. I get requests from all over the world for images and footage that is lease for a fee based on usage and the terms of this lease.

Unless otherwise contracted, it's always a one-time use, one press run or a year's use of these copyrighted images. End of story. That means if Studio 404 leases you an image for your company's website, you may have that image on your home page for a yearly fee. You do not own the image and cannot use it for any other use such as in a company brochure, a webinar or in a TV ad, unless you have contracted to do so.

If you love an image for your brand, you may choose to buy the image or lease it for a longer period of time. If you wish to purchase the image, you will obviously pay a lot more, as the artist who created it may not ever use it again. But you can use this image as your brand forever! You may make prints from this image and you may make profit from this image forever. You now own this image. The copyright has been transferred from the artist to you or your company.

The bottom line on all this is to make sure that you respect the rights of the artists whose works you are using and know copyright laws. If it's not your intellectual property, then just don't use it without permission.

As you are working hard to be successful in your business, so are the artists out there plying their trade to create the images, the articles a writer has created or a beautiful painted piece of art that you may decide is "picture perfect" for your business or promotional needs.

VOTE WITH YOUR FORK

By: Bette Fraser, chef/proprietor of The Well Traveled Fork

As toddlers, when we first wrestled the spoon (or fork, if you will) away from our parent's in an effort to feed ourselves, we began a lifelong journey of making our own food decisions. It is one of the few decisions we make each and every day, yet we take it for granted, minimize it, ignore it or do it rather mindlessly.

What we put into our mouths is one of the most important decisions we make during our lives. It will impact how we feel, how we act and probably how long we live.

We are fortunate to live in a place where farm fresh food is available to us almost year round. The farms and ranches of Central Oregon are busy in all seasons of the year, tending stock and growing cold, hardy vegetables, even in the harsh winter months. Greenhouses and hoop houses have made winter just another growing season in our area.

For generations, farmers have known what the current "farm-to-table" movement is professing. Fresh, seasonal and organic food tastes better and is better for you. Generations of families have had a backyard garden, perhaps out of necessity, but maybe not. Maybe it was because they knew that fresh-picked peas or corn were far superior to anything in the grocery store, and vine-ripened tomatoes were the only ones worth canning for the winter.

We also know that food grown and raised organically, from non GMO seed, without pesticides and chemicals, is better for you. A cage-free, pasture-raised animal is happier and healthier.

Is this kind of healthy food, the kind we want to eat, the kind of food that we want to cook with, more expensive? Unfortunately, the answer is yes. All too often, the answer to why is lost in the discussion, so I turned to Gigi Meyer of Windflower Farms in Bend to get some insight.

Gigi raises beautiful vegetables and a variety of animals on her spread a bit east of town. Gigi told me that smaller, intensively managed, sustainable farms simply take a lot of labor. Labor to hand weed, labor to compost and labor to take care of animals; all this labor is expensive. In addition, organic feed is more expensive. What goes into the animal is important to the end product. Food that is ethically and environmentally raised costs more.

As I tell many of my customers, the animals in Central Oregon are raised with love and care and have a very good life. They are allowed to express their natures and provide us with a superior end product. They have only one bad day. We should all be so lucky.

A carton of eggs from a local farm is $6-7 per dozen vs a carton from a highly industrialized farm, where chickens are caged and can't turn around, are about $3 per dozen. The industrialized chickens are fed a diet full of antibiotics, hormones and other unmentionables. As a consumer, the choice is yours. However, the difference in the eggs is night and day. Frankly, I think we should all have a small flock of our own. It would do wonders to improve our lives.

But local, farm-raised food brings other benefits. People often ask me (as a chef) how I can be so slim. "Aren't all chefs heavy?" I eat a balanced diet, lots of vegetables, fruit, grains and meats from the farm that changes with the seasons. I don't have a need for those expensive dietary supplements. And fresh food just tastes better. You are satisfied more quickly without the need for all the fat, salt, sugar and unpronounceable words that go into highly processed food.

Look at all of the local restaurants and retailers, such as the Chanterelle restaurant at Pronghorn Resort and Bonta Gelato in downtown Bend, that have embraced the local food movement. They are proud to note on their menus which farm grew their food. The grocery stores like Newport Avenue Market are offering local food; the local butcher provides meat from local farms. The farm-to-table movement isn't a fad; it was just lost for a bit. It is back. We can all embrace the farm-to-table movement and eat a better, healthier diet and feel better at the same time. Vote with your fork.

BUSINESS ATTIRE CENTRAL OREGON STYLE

By: Pamela Hulse Andrews, founder/CEO Cascade Publications, Inc.

Bend is a causal place to dress: jeans are found in every office, dress shirts are hardly dressy, more comfort than staid and bare legs are uncovered in the summer months by both men and women. An exception to our casualness may be found in our local financial institutions, where they still take a traditional position.

Business attire has become an unconventional status -- some of us go to work in a suit, shed a jacket, kick on the tennies and workout, to return to a workplace that encourages us to make a difference.

In Bend Fashion Quarterly we discovered real people love real clothes and accessories they can find in local stores such as the Boot Barn, FootZone of Bend, Men's Warehouse, Nashelle Retail Store, North Soles Footwear and Saxon's Fine Jewelers & Designers.

Look for more preferred businesses in the red pages.

Fashion Notes. Real People.

Bend Fashion Quarterly (BFQ) was not a well-planned venture. It was a spur of the moment idea, actually something half heartedly noted over wine and a conversation about shoes. Why in the world would anyone think that Bend needed a fashion magazine? That Central Oregon is big enough to have its own fashion magazine? That people would find it interesting, inspiring and readable?

During this very short creative process (about two months) I realized I wanted to share my idea of fashion and how it has meaning in a unique way in our lives. Style is about your attitude, your clothes, your energy, how you take care of yourself. And in our inspiring communities all over the region we do just that: find happiness, create a look, capitalize on cultural trends, seek our own power and vigor and pretty much dress the way we are most comfortable.

The models you will find in the upcoming issues of the magazine all have stories of their own that they were willing to share with us. We found some were reclaiming their lives, establishing their own form of beauty and style. They simply look fabulous on these pages, but these photos only barely capture the beauty of their nature.

We hope you'll find our new fashion magazine part of your happiness quotient: a go to place for finding and selecting your unique style, a resource for featuring the great things both women and men are doing in our communities, a niche for motivation and a showcase of design and creativity.

Whether you are male or female, our intent is for you to walk away armed with insights to captivate your style. In between quarterlies you can check out our unusually fast-growing Facebook page to stay up-to-date on Central Oregon fashion trends and tips.

By: Jet Cowan, Owner of The Hidden Touch Photography

When it comes to photography, videography and 3D Design, The Hidden Touch is staying on the cutting edge of the industry. With over 5 photographers throughout the Central Oregon area, they cover everything from event photography, family portraits and weddings, to extreme sports, business and product photography.

The Hidden Touch is different from most photography companies in the fact that they shoot over 10 different styles professionally. However, this expertise is truly a team effort.

“Each person on our team focuses on a different field of photography, specializing in two to three types. This allows each of them to show their expertise in their individual areas,” says Jet Cowan, owner of The Hidden Touch.

“Every photographer needs to know the hidden details of how to make the photo ‘wow’ the client in the end. Knowing how to do that is very different in each style, or type of photography,” Cowan says, “For instance, knowing how to accurately time a photo of a snow boarder going off a jump is quite different from capturing an HDR photo of a home. The post processing is different as well.”

The Hidden Touch is staying ahead of the game by offering unique services such as an all female staff upon request, and Interactive 3D Modeling. They are currently in the process of obtaining the FAA 333 Exemption Certificate to legally fly drones in 23 different fields, including real estate and inspection services, to name a few.

As the winners of The Best In Show Award at the Bend Chamber’s Best in Business Showcase, The Hidden Touch has professional staff members that are available to assist you with the entire photo process. From the initial consultation, to the makeup and hair, taking, editing, and printing photos, they offer customizable full service packages.

When it comes to your business, The Hidden Touch offers you the ability to show the world your company image through pristine photos that truly represent your product and your brand.

The Hidden Touch photography, videography, and 3D modeling services are available across the northwest, with photographers available throughout Oregon and Washington.

The Bend Chamber is proud to endorse The Hidden Touch as our official photographer. Their hard work and dedication allows us to capture our membership experiences and events. For all things photography, the Bend Chamber trusts The Hidden Touch.

Leadership Bend: Creating tomorrow's leaders today

Imagine getting a crash course on a community from its history to local hot button issues and having the chance to talk with key leaders one-on-one in just nine months. Leadership Bend delivers that and so much more.

Participants connect one-on-one with elected officials and key business leaders while talking about the issues impacting residents today and getting the inside scoop. Leadership Bend goes behind the scenes and investigates topics from all sides.

"Above all, we work hard to develop well-rounded leaders," says Jamie Christman, director of Leadership Bend. "Graduates of this program will become part of the Leadership Bend Alumni who go on to serve on various community boards, commissions and are involved in key decision-making positions."

While the program focuses intently on learning about Bend and Deschutes County, Leadership Bend also goes one step further in the development of leadership skills. Participants in the program discover their natural talents as leaders and learn to use those abilities when creating legacy projects to benefit the community.

"As a result of Leadership Bend, I feel part of the community for the first time." - Danielle Lordi, Leadership Bend Class of 2015 and attorney at Bryant, Lovlien & Jarvis

SMALLTALK

Do you avoid talking to people in business settings? Do you dread receptions, banquets, and other business-related social events? Do you struggle to make meaningful, long-term connections at work? You're not alone.

Many of us are apprehensive about these situations, because most of us either hate entering rooms where we don't know anyone or hate spending time with people we don't know well. With a little practice and use of these helpful tips, you'll be conversing at the watercooler effortlessly.

Introduce and initiate. Go ahead and initiate with a hello! Even if you recognize, or slightly know someone, re-introduce yourself. Be aware of how he introduces himself (you may know him as Charles, but maybe he goes by Chuck) and use his name throughout your interaction. This will help you remember it in the long run and also establish a personal connection. By taking ownership and initiating a conversation, you will feel more in control to drive the direction of the exchange.

Use an icebreaker. An icebreaker not only provides a way to meet new people, but also helps jump start conversations. For example, using an icebreaker such as "Tell me about your conference last week..." instead of simply saying hello can lead to a fruitful conversation, rather than an uncomfortable silence. Some other valuable icebreakers you might use are: "Bring me up to date on your latest project." "What do you find to be the most enjoyable aspect of your job?" "Tell me about your history with _____." "How did you come to find yourself in the health care field?"

3

Express interest and make an effort. You have to be interested if you want to be interesting. Part of your job as a conversation starter is to get the other person to talk. Listen to what your conversational partner is saying and ask relevant follow-up questions. Take cues from them and make a mental list of questions you can ask to get them to elaborate. If you're talking to Mary in the marketing department, ask what she's working on, what the new marketing strategies are, how she is impacted by the new branding campaign. This is a great way to brainstorm about future projects, find out about potential clients or build a lasting business relationship. That being said, be sure not to ask so many questions that you come off as an interrogator. There should be a flow and balance when interacting.

Find common ground. Whether you're chatting with a new co-worker or a business function speaker, it's important to stay on a related topic. As long as you stay on a subject you are both familiar with – like your specific field or the day's event – you'll be able to communicate easily. Why are you in the setting you're in? Did you find today's seminar helpful? Wasn't the memo this week interesting? Avoid controversial topics like politics, religion, personal relationships and family issues and stick to what you both know is applicable.

Overcome pregnant pauses. It's up to you to keep the conversation going if there are some uncomfortable pauses. Use your setting for ideas to reinvigorate the discussion. Say, "It's great having our sales conference in a warm, tropical place. Have you been to Mexico before?" Use pauses as an opportunity to compliment your international counterpart. Try, "I'm impressed with what you're doing for our Asian business. You've made some huge improvements in our technology department over there." This is also a great time to interject with any material you've previously prepared.

Establish personal boundaries. It's fine if you want to let someone know where you went to college or how many children you have, but be mindful of how much personal information you provide. Sure, your relationship could benefit if you find out both your wives are attorneys, but evaluate the value of the subject matter and its impact on the rapport. If the dialogue gets too sidetracked into personal details, the business-networking angle can become lost. Revealing too many personal details in a business setting can be inappropriate. Use your best judgment to maximize the content of the conversation.

If you are in management it is always good to make contact and interact with as many on the team as possible. And sometimes, there is just a good time to move on. Find an appropriate point in the conversation to make an exit. Say, "I really enjoyed talking to you about today's meeting. I have your card and I'll be in touch with you this week so we can discuss it further." Make a plan that is actionable and give a specific time when you'll follow up. Most importantly, if you say you're going to do something, do it!

TIPS FOR TRADEMARK PROTECTION

By: Kurt Barker, Karnopp Petersen LLP

Your business's intellectual property can be its most valuable asset. In particular, a trademark or service mark can mean everything to a business: your brand, your image and more.

But how do you protect it from the competition? And how do you work to avoid the fate of many local businesses who receive a threatening letter from a "trademark bully," sometimes years after launch, demanding that they drop their name/logo or face a crushing lawsuit?

CHOOSE A UNIQUE MARK

Trademarks should distinguish the source of a good or product. Common names of a product or service generally don't qualify for protection... be creative! Invent a word or choose an arbitrary mark that has nothing to do with the product, such as Apple for computers. Strong, distinctive marks strengthen your legal protection and can also attract client attention.

DO YOUR DUE DILIGENCE

Even the best Google search wiz can't match the thoroughness of a comprehensive review by a trademark search firm, which can catch similarities you'd never imagine. Having that search ran and reviewed by legal counsel may cost less than you think, and is almost always cheaper than fighting a claim (or re-branding to avoid one) down the road.

REGISTER YOUR MARK

State registrations are available, but just about every business — even local — should consider the benefits of registration with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. Those benefits include: a legal presumption that you own the mark (a potential defensive shield against a bully, or offensive sword against a copy-cat competitor); nationwide notice of your claim to the mark; the legal right to use the ® symbol; and more. There can be downsides to attempting registration before you've done your homework, though. Again, a little legal advice in this area can go a long way.

People Making an Impact

TIM CASEY

BEND CHAMBER PRESIDENT & CEO

Bend attracts a certain adventurous spirit. It's a mecca for those of us who are ready to live a different life than you find in larger cities. It's not that it's slower here, we simply choose to focus on life a little differently. We value the quality of where we are and we appreciate what our community has to offer.

In business, it is all about personal connection. It's the relationships that separate the good businesses from the great. The great businesses of our community don't just cultivate the 9 to 5 relationship. Owners and employees of the great businesses volunteer and sit on numerous nonprofits, recreate together and spend time supporting one another and celebrating successes. There is a real connection here in Bend that I haven't experienced anywhere else. People are genuine, they care about you and your family and they want you to succeed.

Tim Casey is available to meet with you, call (541) 382-3221 or email tim@bendchamber.org

Interviews in the following pages are conducted by Rachael Rees van den Berg, Bend Chamber Communications Coordinator

CHAIRMAN OF THE BEND CHAMBER

Brian Fratzke

FRATZKE COMMERCIAL REAL ESTATE

Brian Fratzke is the principal broker and founder of Fratzke Commercial Real Estate Advisors Inc. Brian began his commercial real estate career in 2004 after a 13-year career focusing on information technology and business consulting solutions to the high technology industry in the United States, France, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom.

He opened the doors to Fratzke Commercial Real Estate Advisors in September 2007. Since that time, the company has grown to eight full time team members focused on commercial real estate and commercial property management.

Brian focuses on sales, leasing, consulting and development of commercial real estate in the Central Oregon area. Brian's specific areas of expertise include sales and leasing within the industrial and office sectors.

He has closed over $100 million dollars in sold and leased commercial real estate transactions in Central Oregon.

Serving as the 2016 chairman of the Bend Chamber of Commerce, Brian is an active member of the Bend community.

Q: Why did you get involved with the Bend Chamber and why do you think it's important to support a chamber of commerce?

A: I got involved when I decided to leave corporate America, which employed me in the Bay Area and Europe, and go to work for a Bend-based company. I had a huge amount of success with my corporate career, but I was not part of the Bend community. I would wake up, fly to San Jose, drive up to Cupertino, work 4-5 days, fly home, clean my clothes, pay my bills and maybe ski one day with my family. I knew few people in Bend and I had no real connection to the community.

I joined the Bend Chamber in 2004 as an individual, and in 2007 as a small business with Fratzke Commercial. I didn't look at it as a way to get more business, or for the networking component. I joined because I saw the Bend Chamber's involvement with political and legislative issues that I didn't have time to get involved with. I could get a sprinkling of the topic, maybe provide some input, and would know that the Bend Chamber leaders were out representing me.

Q: What does engagement mean to you?

A: It's the actual involvement of your time and your money. It takes both, and you have to believe in the cause. The successful stories result from leaders who are engaged in charities or business support groups that they are passionate about.

Q: Why do you think it's important for the Bend Chamber board to connect with elected officials?

A: The elected officials are busy people. Serving is not their full-time job. Some run businesses, many of them have families. You have to appreciate that the elected positions are more or less, unpaid positions. As much as I'd like to believe the elected officials have the ability to reach out to the business community, the reality is, they only have so many hours in the day to do that. So, my approach is to connect with them and proactively communicate with the officials and share the challenges business owners are facing.

Q: As the chairman of the Bend Chamber, what do you feel is your responsibility?

A: It is our job to make sure we are speaking on behalf of the membership, the people who elected us to the Bend Chamber Board of Directors. Those members range from salon and retail shop owners, to someone who owns a law firm or service company. It's our job to make sure we are representing the interests of our constituents.

Q: What do you like to do to recharge?

A: I love to mountain bike on Phil's Trail. Mountain biking is one of the most enjoyable activities for me to relieve stress. It's a pro-active health plan. I took an 18-year hiatus and got back into mountain biking at 49.

Bend invites you to try new things and fosters that mentality. There's no judgement. I might be the slowest guy going up the hill, but I make it.

Q: What makes Bend truly special?

A: Everybody in town is happy. They have smiles on their faces. The people who are here made the decision to be here.

In other mountain communities, you have people who only live there three months out of the year. What people appreciate in Bend are the things that support their lifestyles. Bend is a community where everyone has made a sacrifice to be here. There's opportunity here, but it's not just going to drop in your lap. For me, it's a balance. Some weeks I work 70 hours; but don't feel sorry for me, because I'm getting out and playing as much as I want to play. I don't have a typical lifestyle. I actually work a lot of Saturdays and Sundays and then I take a weekday off. On a Friday, I may go out to dinner with my wife and be in bed fairly early. I'll get up at 6 a.m. Saturday, roll into work, work till noon in my sweatpants, a t-shirt and flip flops, and I'll get 20 hours worth of work done. Then, I'll go out and ski or fish. My clients and friends not only accept my lifestyle, but they often join me in my outdoor activities. Sometimes I even do business over brunch.

Don't feel sorry for me.... I even do business over brunch

Q&A

Q: Being a long-time Bendite/business owner, how have you seen the community/business community change?

A: When you grow up here, you have a little different perspective... your heart is in this community. Bend has gone through this continual process of reinventing itself in order to prosper. Starting in 1958, when I was a little boy, this community was based around a downtown type of model. The economy was forest-products based and unless you were part of a family-owned business, you went to college and left. Now our economy is diversified. It's so neat to see so many people grow up here, receive their education here or elsewhere and come back and get a job in Central Oregon.

Q: Do you believe Bend is a business-friendly city?

A: I met with the City of Bend before I started my expansion of Robberson Ford. I said I wanted to stay in the core of the city on Third Street instead of relocating. While it was a challenge, the City of Bend gave me latitude and worked with me so I could reinvest in that part of town and continue to be a proud Third Street merchant.

Q: What's one of your favorite childhood memories of this city?

A: There was a rat pack of kids that lived on East Ninth Street. We'd come out of our houses and what we were going to do that day we had no idea, but it was going to be an adventure and it was going to be fun. It was an unbelievably fantastic place to grow up. We spent every day at the swimming pool, hiking Pilot Butte or exploring the woods at Juniper Park.

Q: What does impact and engagement mean to you?

A: We all have different strengths to bring to the table. It's important that the individuals in our community work together to leverage their strengths when our community is facing big decisions. We also need to have an open dialogue with city and county officials so we work through concerns before they become issues.

Q: As the chairman of the Bend Chamber Advocacy Council, what is the purpose of the council?

A: What the Advocacy and Bend Chamber does, is allow the butcher, the baker and candlestick maker to work together to have a positive impact on business in Bend and Central Oregon. We have to come together and have our voices heard as a local business community at city, county and state levels.

The Advocacy Council is working to keep Bend a positive place to do business and therefore a great place to live. What's good for business is good for Bend and the citizens in Bend.

JEFF ROBBERSON

OWNER AND PRESIDENT OF ROBBERSON FORD

Robberson Ford was established in downtown Bend in 1957. The company added Lincoln in 1961, and became one of the earliest Mazda dealers, adding the Mazda franchise in 1971. Today, the Robberson Ford family has grown to include Robberson Ford Bend, Robberson Ford of Pineville, as well as the Robberson Preowned Super Store and Robberson Collision Center. A cornerstone of the company philosophy is a commitment to the community, which Robberson continues to demonstrate with its resources and actions. Robberson Ford has won multiple awards in the community and received national recognition for exceptional customer service from Mazda and Ford.

Q&A

MICHAEL LALONDE

President & COO Deschutes Brewery Inc.

Past chairman of the Bend Chamber Board of Directors

Deschutes Brewery: As a family and employee-owned brewery, Deschutes believes every pint of beer worth brewing is worth sharing — with friends, family, and even the stranger you just met on the barstool next to you. And every Deschutes Brewery pint shared has a healthy dose of community, experimentation and ingenuity. It's crafted with plenty of balance and drinkability and invested with quality and consistency. This has been the blueprint of Deschutes' DNA since its modest beginnings in 1988 as a small public house in downtown Bend, all the way through to the present.

Q: What does it mean to achieve business success?

A: For Deschutes Brewery, we use the triple bottom line philosophy. We are working to reduce our impact on the environment, be involved in the community and be profitable. I'm a big proponent also of treating people really well ... getting them involved and engaged in a company like ours so when they come to work they have something to look forward to. If you encourage people to really pursue their dreams and careers I think that's a positive business.

Q: Speaking of dreams, was it your dream to be a part of a brewery?

A: I came up here for a vacation. My family and I were thinking about moving.... I walked by the brewery and I said, man, wouldn't it be cool to be the CFO of a brewery? They advertised for the position a couple months later. I started as CFO and I moved into the COO role in 2007 and began my current role five years ago. I gave the worst interview of my life. I walked out, called my wife and told her there was no way I was going to get the job. During the interview, I was asked if I needed coffee. I was in graduate school at the time and I had pulled an all-nighter on the Friday and Sunday before my Tuesday interview and I was totally exhausted. They still make fun of me now for my interview.

Q: What advice would you give someone interviewing for Deschutes Brewery?

A: It's amazing how many people come to an interview uneducated about the company they are interviewing for. People need to think about what job they would like to have and how they would perform that function and have an impact on the company. People have to have a passion for beer. It matters that you are into the product that we make.

Q: What beer do you have in your fridge right now?

A: I like the Dissident... In my refrigerator I have Hop Trip and Jubelale.

Q: When you're not drinking beer, what do you like to do for fun?

A: I love to ski. I play squash three or four times a week in the morning for exercise. I love fly fishing. I paddle board. I love being with my kids and my wife.

Q: When it comes to future success for our city, what strategy should Bend take?

A: We need to think about having an improvement seven generations from now. There are some community leaders that have had that vision and have had a huge impact on this city.

We need to think about having an improvement seven generations from now. There are some community leaders that have had that vision and have had a huge impact on this city.

Q&A

Event Divas is a small company focused on helping non-profit organizations with event-based fundraising, donor relations, event concept development, mission-based storytelling and overall fundraising strategy. Founded originally in Salem in 2006, Event Divas has been working with Central Oregon charities since 2009.

Q: How did you get into the business of event planning with your company Event Divas?

A: After the birth of my second child, my husband Kurt and I decided that I would leave my contract lobbying job to focus on raising our kids Nick and Ethan for several years. During that time, I became involved with a MOMS group that not only helped all of us stay connected (and sane) as stay at home mothers, but also looked out into our community to see how we could help others. We began a fundraising event for Family Building Blocks, a Salem-area relief nursery. In our first year, we raised over $20,000, which helped strengthen many families, keeping kids safe in their homes. From there, I was hooked and have never looked back.

Q: Bend has a lot of different events. How do you think events add to the culture of our community?

A: When we moved here from Salem, we were blown away by the sheer number of events and things to do here in Bend. We have a robust performing arts community, killer sports and outdoor events, the visual arts are front and center, we have an amazing dining scene... Events big and small are where we come together as a community and where we create community! We are lucky to have so many opportunities to engage and celebrate with like-minded folks.

Q: What does business success mean to you?

A: For me personally, business success means making a difference and changing lives for the better. While my company name doesn't reflect it, our central purpose is to help non-profits providing crucial services in Central Oregon to raise funds to support their mission.

TALENA BARKER

Owner of Event Divas, Bend Chamber Board of Directors

When we're successful, fundraising goals are exceeded, new friends are made, awareness is raised and more members of our community are able to access the services they need.

Q: How do you think the lifestyle of Bend helps companies achieve business success?

A: That we actively invest in our famous lifestyle helps us achieve business success. People in Bend really care about each other, and our collective quality of life. The Bend business community is generous – not only with their funds and resources – but with their time and talent. We have so many business leaders who take the time to mentor others. We're a community of collaborators who know that creating business success globally helps us all succeed, ultimately.

ALANA HUGHSON

PRESIDENT & CEO OF THE CENTRAL OREGON VISITORS ASSOCIATION

About:

The Central Oregon Visitors Association (COVA) was incorporated in 1971 when five preeminent community leaders, led by Mt. Bachelor Founder Bill Healy, envisioned that cooperative destination tourism marketing would be far more impactful to establish Central Oregon as a destination than a multitude of individual marketing messages. These visionaries built a collaborative marketing strategy to message the region's assets to prospective visitors. One thing that has remained steadfast is COVA's fundamental mission: Unified, leveraged marketing is the optimal way to generate ROI, maximize resources and position the region effectively as a destination. With annual overnight visitors to Central Oregon at more than 3.8 million annually, it is evident that COVA's long-term strategy continues to be a successful economic driver for Bend and the region.

Q: What does quality of life mean to you?

A: I travel regularly for work and never step off a plane at RDM that I don't take a deep breath of gratitude for the heavenly smell of juniper and the fact that I get to come home to a place like Central Oregon. Bend epitomizes quality of life. The true quality of life comes from its people; both long term and new residents, who have chosen to invest in and support our community with their passion and expertise. Bend has been my home since my parents moved the family here from Aspen, CO in 1970 to build and operate a small ski lodge on Century Drive. At that time, Bend had fewer than 10,000 residents and my parents took a big risk pulling up stakes to move here. As much as the region has grown in the past five decades, the quality of life in Bend has continued to improve.

Q: As an expert in the tourism industry, what role does tourism play in regard to business in Bend?

A: There is a direct connection between business development, industry diversification and tourism. Central Oregon has been a nationally recognized tourism destination for decades and a large predominance of people moving new businesses to Bend are folks who first fell in love with the region while here on vacation. Tourism has always had a strong, direct connection to economic development and business diversification and tourism will continue to play a major role in how our region develops.

Q: What do you like to do to recharge?

A: Like many Bendites, golf, skiing, hiking and cycling are some favorite 're-charge' activities. Relaxing on the patio with the sun on my face and a good book in my hand, watching the parade of deer and squirrels is pretty hard to beat, as well.

Q: What's a fun fact about you?

A: Absence makes the heart grow fonder. Relocating to the east coast early in my career heightened my hope to one day return to be near family and make Bend my permanent home. Living and working in Washington, DC for nearly 10 years (1984-1993) was an exciting adventure and provided some awesome opportunities. As a political junkie, I still can't believe I've had the privilege to meet four former U.S. Presidents... Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan, George Bush, Sr. and George W. Bush.

Q&A

Samantha McCoy

Co-owner/Cidermaker of Atlas Cider

ATLAS Cider Co. produces authentic hard cider fermented from 100 percent fresh-pressed fruit. Partnering with Northwest farmers to source the fruit has been a priority of Atlas from the beginning. Atlas's ciders start with a base of local fruits that are pressed to achieve a balance of sweetness, tartness and dryness. Atlas forges its ciders in Bend and distributes them in bottles, cans and kegs throughout the Northwest.

Q: What do you love about living and doing business in Bend?

A: We were really drawn to Bend because we wanted to huddle down, have a family and be outdoorsy – the same reason a lot of people love Bend. Bend is such a good community. It's family oriented and everybody supports each other in town, which is so nice. Every time I go out I see people I know, so it has that small town feel, but it also has the big-city amenities, which makes it such a great place to do business too.

Q: How is Bend family friendly?

A: The schools are amazing here in town. I would send my kids to any of them without even questioning it! At local events, kids are always welcome. It's such a good atmosphere. People look out for each other.

Q: How has Bend helped your business grow?

A: People in town are really conscious of supporting local business in general. If they have the option, nine out of 10 times they will choose the local option or brand. The brewing community has been very supportive ... We've been steadily expanding since opening, and now we're in the process of tripling our capacity in the production facility. We also recently opened a tasting bar on SW Industrial Way, which gave us that connection to our community.

Q: Can you share a fun fact about Atlas Cider?

A: It's a family-run operation. We source all of our fruit from local places, mostly Hood River. You can get ciders all over the world from our bar. We're big cider fans... But we're not anti-beer, in fact, we have eight local beers on tap in our bar!

HEALTH PLANS for business owners in need of group rates.

We are the only chamber of commerce in the state of Oregon to offer a medical health plan, and have been doing so since 2010. The Bend Chamber's Association Health Plan, carried by Pacific Source, currently covers over 175 groups and provides richer benefits than many carriers offer to the small group market.

"With the rising cost of health insurance, many businesses are looking for a place to turn to offer affordable health care," said Bend Chamber President & CEO Tim Casey. "The chamber's plan gives businesses a way to offer competitive benefits to their employees at an affordable rate."

In Oregon, we work hard, and we play hard, so mishaps are bound to happen. Make sure you and your employees are prepared. The plan is available for businesses that are members of the Bend Chamber of Commerce and currently employ two or more eligible employees. The plan provides several choices of medical plans that include major medical, preventive care, maternity, mental health, alternative care, vision and prescription drug coverage. Businesses also have the option for dental coverage as well.

If you have additional questions, contact Sandy Stephenson at the Bend Chamber (541) 382-3221 or email sandy@bendchamber.org or call Johnson Benefit Planning at (541) 382-3571

MAKE SURE YOU BUY THE RIGHT HEALTH PLAN

Central Oregonians have a variety of choices when it comes to buying health plans. And every year, those options change. Here are some key things to help ensure you choose a health plan that meets your needs, whether you are shopping for a new plan or renewing your existing coverage during annual open enrollment:

1. What's your monthly rate? Each year your monthly premium could go up or down. It pays to make sure you're getting a competitive rate. Keep in mind that the cheapest monthly rate doesn't necessarily give you the lowest overall annual cost. What makes good financial sense for you depends on many factors, such as how often you use medical care.
2. Is your doctor still in-network? Negotiating with doctors and hospitals is one way health insurers keep out-of-pocket costs down. This means networks can change. As you look at health coverage, find out whether the doctors and hospitals you prefer will remain in your plan's network. If your doctor or local hospital leaves the network, you can still go to that doctor or hospital — however your out-of-pocket costs for receiving care will increase significantly.
3. Have your benefits changed? Another way health plans keep costs down is by changing or removing benefits from your plan. Benefits such as chiropractic and acupuncture may not be covered as a standard benefit. If these benefits are important to you, find out whether your plan covers them.
4. Will your plan cover you if you need medical care out of state? If you frequently travel outside Oregon, it's a good idea to know how your health plan covers out-of-state medical care, other than for emergency medical services.

Paying attention to how often you use care and what kind of care you use throughout the year – along with these tips - may help you to choose a plan that is right for you. To learn more about plans offered by LifeWise Health Plan of Oregon, visit www.lifewiseor.com.

The Weather

TEMPERATURE

Because of Bend's high altitude and crisp, clear air, evening temperatures average 30° to 40° below the daytime highs. Evenings are generally cool, even in the summer, requiring sweaters or jackets. Annual temperature extremes show that only one year out of five has a temperature colder than -17° or warmer than 100°.

PRECIPITATION

Bend's average annual precipitation is less than 12 inches – over half of which falls between November and February, often as snow. Brief, and often unexpected, thunderstorms usually provide most of the summer rain. The average annual snowfall is 33.8 inches. Snow rarely accumulates to more than a few inches in depth nor lies on the ground for an extended period. Snow depth in Bend exceeds 24 inches in only one winter out of twenty. At the Mt. Bachelor Ski Resort, 22 miles southwest of Bend, snow normally reaches depths of 160 to 180 inches.

SUNSHINE

Bend has the highest average number of sunny days in the state. With an average of 158 clear days per year and an additional 105 days that are mostly sunny. Many of the remaining days provide substantial sunshine.

GROWING SEASON

Because severe frosts have occurred as late as May 31 and as early as Sept. 1, the general advice is to plan for a 92-day growing season. Any transplanting of annual bedding plants in Bend before Memorial Day involves some risk. Central Oregon has been known to experience some freezing temperatures during the months of June, July and August.

WIND

Surface winds prevail out of the South and Southeast from October to February, then West and Northwest for the remaining months. Wind speeds average from 5 to 7 mph most months.

WATER AND SEWER SYSTEM & RATES

For several years over the past decade, Bend has had its water ranked among the best in the country in independent water quality tests. The City's system includes a watershed (collected from a diversion 13 miles from the City limits and supplemented by a diversion of natural spring flows from the Tumalo Creek basin) and deep aquifer wells (9 groundwater facilities consisting of 25 wells with depth ranges between 400 and 1000 feet). Annual snowmelt and precipitation contributes an average recharge of 3800 cubic feet per second annually, about 2.4 billion gallons per day. In addition to the City of Bend, two other water providers serve potable water to customers in areas adjacent to the City's system – Roats Water System and Avion Water Company.

Bend's wastewater system utilizes the latest technology for the least environmental impact and greatest savings to residents and businesses. The monthly fixed rate for sewer service in the Bend area is $44.37. There is a 3% franchise fee in addition to the fixed rate on both sewer and water.

HOUSING COSTS

The Central Oregon rental market began tightening in 2010 and continues to face heightened demand in the midst of constrained supply. According to the Central Oregon Rental Owners Association, overall vacancy rates have shrunk to 1.04% down from 12.4% in 2009.

The 2014 Central Oregon Rental Survey showed total tri-county rental units: to include apartments, duplexes, triplexes, fourplexes, houses and manufactured homes at 3,862 units, 2,576 of which are in Bend. For renters the current market is tight with multiple rental applications on most listings. Contributing to the shortage of rental homes in Bend, has been a conversion of long term rental homes to short term rentals which attract many visiting tourists during peak visitor seasons.

According to the US Census Bureau's American Community Survey, data from 2013 shows the median gross rent for Bend peaked in real terms in 2008 at $969 and is now $69 (7.12%) lower. From a recent low of 876.0 in 2012, real median gross rent has now increased by $24 (2.74%). Average gross rent for Bend peaked in real terms in 2011 at $995 and is now $54 (5.43%) lower. From a recent low of 905.0 in 2012, real average gross rent has now increased by $36 (3.98%).

NEW VS. OLD

Article submitted by Hayden Homes

*"Bend is one of those magical places that you never want to leave. It's full of tasty beer, smiling people, dogs, outdoor activities and sunshine."
- The Statesman Journal*

When considering buying a home, an important (and often mistakenly overlooked) decision to make is whether to buy a new or previously owned or "used" home.

There's no denying the benefits of being the first inhabitants – from the latest designs and features, to no enormous hidden "what-if-this-breaks-down" costs, or the not-so-hidden "we'll have to renovate this room" costs.

Similar to buying a new car with its amazing smell, warranty and peace of mind, a new home also boasts these benefits – yet doesn't it make sense to prioritize them even more so in a home? Even the safety standards a new car possesses translates to a new home. Newly-installed appliances, electrical and plumbing are much less likely to fail.

Not worrying

There is an endless amount of (usually expensive) items your "used" home may need repaired or replaced, whereas a newly-built home will not. The amazing thing is these new homes don't even cost more than the used ones!

At Westerly by Hayden Homes, all of this immaculate newness can be yours to appreciate and break-in as only YOU wish to. All of our homes come with a warranty coupled with a Zero Defect Guarantee - subject to our 100 percent Quality Inspection Checklist consisting of over 300 items that are reviewed, checked off and certified complete. Even after move-in, our customer relations specialist will quickly take care of most repairs that come up within the first year.

Every Hayden Home also features the latest finishes hand-picked by our professional in-house designer, along with a wide variety of award-winning home plans to choose from. Our Westerly community has the added bonus of being set in the desirable Northwest area of Bend, meaning you can have a brand new home without sacrificing location.

Call or visit us online to learn more about the new home benefits available at Westerly or any of our other Northwest communities.

ADDITIONAL BENEFITS OF A NEW HOME INCLUDE (BUT ARE NOT LIMITED TO):

Not needing to spend hours repainting and/or steaming off years'-worth of wall paper

Not wondering how sanitary your used toilets can possibly be

Not finding a nest of rodents in the rafters that somehow eluded the inspector

Not worrying about how much longer your 20-year roof will hold out

Not thinking about what could have possibly stained a carpet so badly

“The centerpiece of Bend’s park system is Drake Park. With one-half mile of riverfront property, it is a popular gathering spot for friends and families. The reflection of Mount Bachelor off Mirror Pond in this picturesque park is one of the most well known images of Bend. Make sure a stroll along the Deschutes River at Drake Park is on your list of to-dos when visiting downtown Bend” - Visit Bend

The recreational opportunities are almost limitless here with everything from rafting, camping, golfing, rock climbing, mountain biking, fishing, downhill and cross-country skiing and much more! After a hard day playing on the mountain or a nearby local stream, you’ll still have time to head out for a local show or sample a meal from our delectable selection of restaurants.

Bend isn’t only about recreation, the city also hosts many festivals, fairs, parades, concerts, and shows throughout the year. Enjoy an evening of music at the Les Schwab Amphitheater or make sure to hit the local Farmer’s Market in the spring and summer. Looking for something even more cultural? Bend is surrounded by several museums and theatres.

Each Bend neighborhood has its own charm. The Bend Neighborhood Association is a great resource to learn more about our beautiful neighborhoods.

DIVERSE LAND CHOICES

Bend has a total of 1,735 acres zoned for industrial use, 705 acres zoned for mixed use, and 1,657 for commercial use. The City is undergoing an Urban Growth Boundary (UGB) expansion process that will bring additional property into the city boundary. The process is ongoing and significant new construction will be limited until the process and new growth boundary are final.

Industrial: Bend offers a mix of industrial buildings and land to suit business needs of all types. From light and heavy industrial use in just a few thousand square feet to over 100,000 square feet in a single, existing facility, there are a variety of turnkey industrial properties.

Commercial: Bend currently has over 300,000 square feet of existing commercial space with vacancy in the 11% range. After significant building over the past decade, Bend boasts an impressive mix of office space, from class A to class C.

Retail: There is a total of nearly 4.5 million square feet of retail space in Bend. Recently, retail vacancy rates have dropped to the 4% to 5% range. Bend offers several high-traffic shopping districts including Downtown Bend, Old Mill District, Cascade Village Shopping Center, Bend River Promenade, Bend Factory Stores, and more.

A LITTLE INSIGHT ON EMPLOYMENT

According to the Oregon Employment Department, over 75% of Oregon firms have nine or fewer employees and the average firm employs 15 people. Recent research released by Dun & Bradstreet and American Express said that 99.1% of businesses in Oregon were less than $10 million in revenues. To an even greater extent than the state, Central Oregon's business environment is typified by innovative, small companies, producing niche-market products and services.

According to Damon Runberg, Central Oregon Economist, based in Bend, employment in the various firm sizes differs from the makeup at the state level. A greater proportion of workers are employed in smaller firms and large firms are less prevalent. These differences are likely due to the industry clusters in Central Oregon that favor smaller firm sizes, such as construction, real estate, accommodation and food services.

Some of the sectors with the largest employment numbers in Bend include healthcare, tourism focused businesses, local city and county government, the school district, and large retailers.

While Deschutes County's employment base peaked at 69,327 in 2007, employment has been steadily climbing since the recession ended and now stands at 67,448.

New residence hall opens at COCC

In fall 2015, Central Oregon Community College opened its new residence hall – welcoming students from across the college’s district and throughout the country, as far away as Florida.

The new facility houses 320 students in single or double bedroom “semi-suite” rooms with a small living area and shared bathroom. The building also includes community lounges and study spaces located on every floor. These spaces have seen heavy use by the first residents to enjoy the space.

Danika Hendriksen, a graduate of Silverton High School, chose to live in the new residence hall because she decided that living on campus would provide the quintessential college experience. Plus, she says, the view of the mountains is phenomenal. “It was a guaranteed community I could be involved in and where I could find a group of friends,” said Danika. “I would tell people who are contemplating living in the residence hall how much of a community this truly is.”

Alicia Moore, COCC’s dean of student and enrollment services, is excited about the student success opportunities associated with this project.

“There is extensive research which indicates students who live on campus have higher GPA, retention and graduation rates than their peers who live off campus. Creating such opportunities is critical for the success of our students,” said Moore.

Moore also emphasized that an expanded residence life program will create greater opportunities for students to build connections with campus faculty, staff, programs and services, thereby positively impacting their overall college experience.

COCC’s new residence hall is centrally located on campus and adjacent to the Barber Library, Coats Campus Center and Mazama Gymnasium, creating a “hub” for student support services, greatly improving the student experience.

Anyone interested is encouraged to contact COCC’s Office of Residence Life at 541-383-7588 or reslife@cocc.edu.

My experience at COCC: “I learned from incredible professors who really cared about my education and my overall success ... I thanked my lucky stars that I stayed in Bend where I had so many opportunities to find my way with the support of so many incredible people.” Erin Zurflu, M.D., Anesthesiology Resident PGY-3 (Post Graduate Year 3 of training), University of Colorado -

STATE OF THE BEND-LA PINE SCHOOLS:

Bend-La Pine Schools provides world-class education and skills that prepare students for the future. The district welcomes partnerships with the business community and invites local residents to volunteer their time to serve students. "We are grateful to be part of an engaged community — thank you for your ongoing commitment to education and our students. We couldn't do this meaningful work without you and your support." - Superintendent Shay Mikalson

About OSU-Cascades

Oregon State University's campus in Bend, Ore. provides students excellence in academics, practical and experiential learning opportunities, and the lifelong advantages of a premier research university.

OSUcascades.edu

Growing for Central Oregon

Oregon State University - Cascades features outstanding faculty in degree programs that reflect Central Oregon's vibrant economy, abundant natural resources and commitment to sustainability. OSU-Cascades expanded to a four-year university when it welcomed its first freshman class in fall 2015.

A New Campus

OSU-Cascades' new campus is a 1/2 mile from the Graduate & Research Center, 1.9 miles from downtown Bend, and near trails, recreation, entertainment, athletic and medical facilities, and shopping.

Walking, bike share and rideshare programs will minimize vehicle miles traveled and provide options for getting to, from and around the new campus.

Enrollment

OSU-Cascades' enrollment is slated to grow to 3,000 to 5,000 students by 2025 to meet state educational attainment goals. The campus will serve students from Central Oregon, as well as Oregon, the U.S. and international destinations.

Faculty and Research

A growing faculty includes excellent teachers and researchers who are preparing future leaders, addressing local and global challenges, and serving our communities as part of OSU's land grant mission.

Our Community

Local support and collaboration are helping shape the future of OSU-Cascades so that the campus continues to enhance the community and creates a culture of higher education for future generations.

Impact

Until now, Bend has been the largest metropolitan area in Oregon without a four-year university. A university will support Central Oregon's educational, economic and cultural goals, and serve as a partner for businesses, non-profits and the community.

A four-year university for Central Oregon

OSU-Cascades was born out of a 30-year community effort to bring a university to the region. After record enrollment growth and philanthropic support, in 2012 the Oregon University System endorsed OSU-Cascades' expansion. In 2013, the Oregon State Legislature approved capital funding to establish a four-year university campus.

Construction on a new campus in Bend broke ground in 2014. The campus is slated to open in fall 2016.

By the Numbers

Based on fall 2015 enrollment, unless otherwise noted

1,157 enrolled students, including 1,016 undergraduate and graduate students, and 141 attending classes at COCC

1 in 5 students engage in internships, practicums and study abroad programs with businesses, organizations and agencies in Central Oregon and around the world

16 students on average per class

35% of students are first in their family to attend college

73% of students are from Central Oregon, 21% are from other Oregon communities, 6% are from out of state

48% of students transfer from COCC

16 undergraduate majors offered

2,746 degrees awarded since founding in 2001

$2.4m awarded in scholarships since 2001 through the OSU Foundation

1,200 community members attended lectures in Central Oregon presented by OSU faculty researchers from Bend and Corvallis

$3.2m in grant funding generated since 2011 to further research in energy, teaching, mental health and natural resources

“Cascade Business News helped Fratzke Commercial Real Estate build its brand from the very beginning of our firm. We made it through an incredibly tough time between 2008 and 2011 and utilized CBN as our primary source to market and advertise to the open market. We have been very happy with Cascade Business News and their circulation and readership.”

~Brian Fratzke, Fratzke Commercial Real Estate

Bend Fashion Quarterly is Oregon's premier fashion magazine...a unique periodical featuring fashion, design, style, trends and inspiration. The lovely models in the pages of BFQ all have stories of their own that they were willing to share... reclaiming their lives, establishing their own form of beauty and style and capturing their intrinsic beauty.

Cascade A&E is devoted entirely to recognizing and promoting the vibrant cultural life found in Central Oregon featuring articles, reviews and news briefs on the visual arts, music, theatre, dance, fine dining, fashion, film and video, photography, festivals, events, literature and poetry. Oregon's only dedicated arts and culture magazine.

Building Better Communities Since 1989

It's the spark of an idea.

It's the ideas we shape together, the alliances we forge and the legacy we pass on.

It's access to new markets while preserving quality of life. It's not just the place we live but the place we're all creating. And it's why we work to connect and cultivate the business community in Central Oregon.
